PRINTED WORD EN-DURES—

Batesville Guard
From the time television assumed a major role in the art of human communications, there have been those who have felt the demise of the printed word was only a matter of time. Yet, as James J. Kilpatrick has written:

"The situation is far from hopeless. The late Douglas Freeman used to complain that newspapermen write on sand. In a sense we do. Yet this is better than television, which writes on wind."

"The printed word must always have this enormous advantage over TV — that it is available to the reader at his convenience, to be absorbed in whole or in part, at any hour; to be clipped, filed, or mailed. Some of the products of our labor may be used to wrap fish, but as a medium of communication, the printed word endures."

Both TV and the printed word have their places as long as we live in a land where freedom of speech and freedom of the press stand as bulwarks of liberty.

Teacher to trade-in overalls

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Giorgio Lena, an Italian immigrant moving furniture for a living despite his two doctorate degrees, says he plans to turn in his work overalls and accept a teaching offer at the University of Dallas.

Lena said he received the offer shortly after stories appeared last week describing his predicament.

"You can imagine how excited I am," he said. "For the past year I have been living in a terrible dream."

The 36-year-old scholar took a job on the maintenance staff of Florida State University—where in June 1971 he had been awarded a doctorate in Spanish literature—after he was unable to secure a teaching post at any of the 1,300 colleges where he said he sent applications.

"I am very happy I will have the opportunity to teach again," Lena said in an interview. "I have been a teacher much of my life."

Lanky and baldheaded, Lena speaks five languages and holds an earlier doctorate in literature from the University of Turin in Italy. He taught at schools in Italy, Uruguay and Sweden before coming to the United States in 1967 to earn his second doctorate.

Dr. Robert Turner, Florida project director for Jobs for Older Americans, said the publicity surrounding Lena's case was apparently directly responsible for the teaching offer.

"I'm really pleased he got the job," said Turner. "He was such a humble, friendly and courteous soul."

Lena, a bachelor, said he starts teaching Spanish literature at the University of Dallas at the end of the month and had to borrow money from his landlord to purchase a plane ticket to get there.

"I have abandoned my provisional job as a furniture mover," he declared. "But it was not a bad job. It was necessary for me to have food on my table."

Is the court overworked?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ever since Warren Burger became chief justice he has sounded one persistent theme: the Supreme Court is overloaded with work and something must be done about it.

From Justice William O. Douglas Wednesday night came a dissent—calm, soft, with a smile, but a characteristically independent disagreement with the predominant view.

Burger's plea, sounded before bar and judicial groups and the public at large, has won for the court a handful of additional law clerks and administrators, an extra few dollars from a sometimes skeptical Congress.

But is the court overworked? Douglas, in a rare CBS-TV interview, suggested it is not. He agreed with Burger that the actual number of cases reaching the high court is on the rise—from 1,800 a year three decades ago up to about 4,200 currently. The more important point, Douglas went on, is that "we're actually hearing and deciding fewer cases now than when we were when I went on the court." This means more appeals than ever before are being tossed out without full consideration.

Douglas, the senior justice, who took his seat upon appointment of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1939, said the court still has nine men, but the selective process has changed. And that's not all, he said.

"The judges have changed, the idea of what is important has changed in the minds of the judges—a highly selective consideration."

"Is this case fit to take—should we take it—and so on? And we take fewer and fewer."

"When I went on the court we sat six days a week. Under (former Chief Justice Earl) Warren we sat five days a week, a conference on Friday.

"And now it looks as if our trend will be to three days a week, with a conference on Saturday. The job takes about four days a week."

Burger has signaled Congress that he would welcome legislative action to cut down the kinds of cases that can be brought to the court.

Douglas went along—to a point.

One of the reasons courts are congested, he said, "is that we as a people had a great propensity to make everything that somebody objects to on some moral ground a crime. And a lot of the stuff that's going on in our courts involve only people but no victims."

By this he said he meant crimes like vagrancy, drunkenness and prostitution—"too much minutia of the lower thing."

Judges, Douglas said, "should save their energies for the big things." And, he added,

"on the big things, the problem has been greatly exaggerated."

And this is where Douglas clashed directly with the Burger view. Environmental and consumer class actions, he said, must not be shut out.

"If Congress should redesign the jurisdiction of federal courts so as to leave out of them the environmental questions, then we go down the drain really very fast," the justice said.

"Because we then would be victims of the administrative agencies."

"And these administrative agencies, though they're very high-minded and though they're not venal, are very oppressive. There must be some check on them. There must be, unless they're going to be abolished."

Douglas' work methods are very much in line with what he said.

Every year, consistently, he votes to hear many more appeals than any other member of the court. Douglas also writes the tersest and briefest opinions, if not necessarily the most literary.

And he persists in the peculiar and highly individualistic custom of deciding on his own when it is time to close the office and head for Goose Prairie, his telephoneless retreat in Washington state where CBS filmed the interview last June.

What this generally means is that Douglas hands in his opinions and quits while the court and his eight colleagues are still sitting. This has been true under Burger as it was under Warren.

"Some of the others complain they're working 18 hours a day every day to keep up," interviewer Eric Sevareid reminded him.

"Well," replied Douglas, who is 73, "you need the week to think about these problems, but you can be hiking while you are—you don't need to stop thinking."

ON STATE BOARD

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Dale Bumpers appointed Mrs. Leonard Smith of Camden Thursday to the state Labor Board.

Shriver is praised by McClellan in LR

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — With unexpected encouragement from Arkansas' senior senator, Sargent Shriver is getting on with his campaign rounds of binding Democratic wounds and lambasting the Nixon record.

Shriver, the Democratic vice presidential candidate, Friday called President Nixon "power mad," in St. Louis, plunged into a wildly enthusiastic student crowd at the University of Missouri, and promised at Little Rock that a McGovern administration "will not lock the Pentagon door and throw the key in the Potomac River."

In Missouri, Shriver was joined in his party unity search by the man he replaced in the ticket's No. 2 spot, Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo. Missouri Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said, however, a Democratic victory in his state will be hard to come by and can be achieved only if all sections of the party get together.

Similar advice came in Little Rock from Arkansas Gov. Dale Bumpers.

But at least one significant movement toward party unity came from Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., self-styled conservative and chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Shriver's decision to address the Arkansas State Democratic Convention today was the apparent reason for a statement from McClellan which was as near an endorsement of the McGovern ticket as he has ever given.

"Never before has our state been accorded such attention," McClellan said, complaining that many Democratic presidential tickets in the past have displayed "neglect and unconcern toward Arkansas and the South."

Singling Shriver out for special praise, but not mentioning the name of his running mate, Sen. George McGovern, McClellan said it is time to revitalize the party in the South and "take it back to its traditional role of providing large majorities" for national Democratic candidates.

Bumpers introduced Shriver at a Democratic banquet Friday night, praised his record as head of the Peace Corps and the Office of Economic Opportunity, and said Shriver was a man who had "consistently given up the good life" to devote efforts to the country and the party.

"It's time the party repaid its debt by going to work for him," Bumpers said.

But Bumpers alluded to signs of disunion among Arkansas Democrats by telling an audience of some 450 Democratic regulars, "We are Democrats, and we don't pick up our marbles and go home every time we don't get our own way."

For his part, Shriver dismissed as "baloney" inferences that McGovern is a "radical."

Hoffa may get to go to N. Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Hoffa may still go to Hanoi to seek release of American prisoners of war, his attorney says, but whatever administration support he had apparently has vanished.

After two days of hemming and hawing, key members of the Nixon administration appear now to be joining Secretary of State William P. Rogers in attacking the plan and the way it was devised.

FOOTPRINTS

By GEORGE SMITH

It was about this time in 1966 that I was embedded knee-deep in pied type, proof presses and pica poles in a printing course at East Texas State University.

For some unexplained reason, a required subject for all journalism majors at ETSU was a torture-course called Printing 124. (It was listed in the catalog next to Medieval Architecture) I was not overly fond of the course (the ink kept getting under my fingernails) and I put off taking it as long as possible.

My father, who kept inquiring why it was taking me five years to get a simple BS degree, instructed me to enroll in the course or transfer to Hanoi U. I took the course.

Now I will be the first to admit that I have never been good with my hands; I often get confused while tying my shoes or brushing my teeth. And trying to make up copy in those tinny, funny-looking holders was beyond me. You had to put the type in upside down and backward: I was perpetually spelling "big" as "dip" and "radar" as "rabar" and "puppy" as "quqqy."

I am not by nature a troublemaker, but I simply couldn't understand why the type case was all mixed up . . . why it wasn't arranged in alphabetical order.

"Don't ask so many questions," my instructor politely yelled at me during one classroom discussion on "The Smith Approach to the Renovation of Printing."

"This is the way it is to be done. And this is the way that you will do it. Is that understood?"

"Yessir," I said humbly, as I frantically searched for an "h" to finish composition of a letterhead.

I was called on the carpet several times during the course of the course, but a memorable shouting match developed when the instructor checked every type case and noticed that one — mine — was arranged quite differently from the others.

In alphabetical order. With visions of a big fat "F" flapping around in my cranium, I frantically explained that I was planning to rearrange the case at the end of the semester, that no one else used the case and that I meant no harm, that I was dumb and couldn't catch onto the system, that I was from a poor home, that if I flunked printing I would spend the rest of my life picking cucumbers on the heels and the world would be denied another William Allen White, that my parents and my 13 sisters and 12 brothers, all of whom were slaving to send me to school, would be disappointed.

The "picking cucumbers" line got to him, because he brushed a tear from his eye, patted me on the shoulder and told me to put the type back the way it was supposed to be.

I checked the type case chart carefully, then began an exhaustive search for the "e" hole.

One of the supposedly fun jobs of the course was the making of personalized original Christmas cards. Each student was issued a linoleum-topped wooden block, instructed to carve a scene in the linoleum and print 25 cards.

Carve? Everytime I try to cut my toenails I have to have stitches.

I decided on some simple design, perhaps a "Merry Christmas" in block letters across the face of the card. Or a script Noel, perhaps. Or something daring like a six-sided star and the word "Peace" carved at a slight slant.

Then I noticed another student who had dashed out a design on paper that included shepherds, a thousand sheep, star flashes, an angel and the words "Unto you is born..."

The girl to his right was busily drawing an abstract "Mandonna and Child" and a hefty sorority girl with an acne problem was free-handing a design that included Santa Claus and his reindeer seated in a 1957 Chevrolet convertible.

"It will be in three colors," she said smugly.

Undaunted, I badgered an art school dropout to draw the three wise men on camels, aimed in the general direction of a star which hung lopsided over the skyline of Dallas.

With tongue-biting intensity, I dug out the penciled lines, printed it in dark blue and turned it in.

The assignment was returned with the following note:

"Mr. Smith, for your determination to improve your mental attitude in this course, I hereby grant you a 'B' on the exercise."

Then came the P.S.

"The original idea of putting the wise men on pregnant rabbits was worthy of the grade. Happy New Year."

See why I hate printing?

Chess: A popular sport

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — "People want to take chess lessons from me for $100 an hour," Shelby Lyman said incredulously, "and I don't have time."

A few months ago, chess teacher Shelbourne Richard Lyman of Brooklyn would have made time for well-paying patrons. Now he's busy making personal appearances at $1,000 each, conferring with publishers over advances of $40,000 and $50,000 for books on chess and discussing television programs on chess for untold thousands of dollars in fees.

"I didn't have an agent before," he said. "Now I have agents keeping track of agents."

The sudden fame was thrust upon him because of his work as commentator on the educational television network broadcast of the world chess championship between Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky. The programs, first televised locally in New York State by the state Public Broadcast System, were picked up and distributed nationwide.

Although he welcomes the publicity, Lyman is perturbed by the description that he is the Julia Child of chess. "I don't even look like her," he said, missing the analogy completely.

The 35-year-old former sociology teacher is distinguished by his nervous energy and his passion for teaching chess. "It's important not to discourage people, to make them relax and enjoy the game. We have to avoid making chess formidable and make it something for people to enjoy."

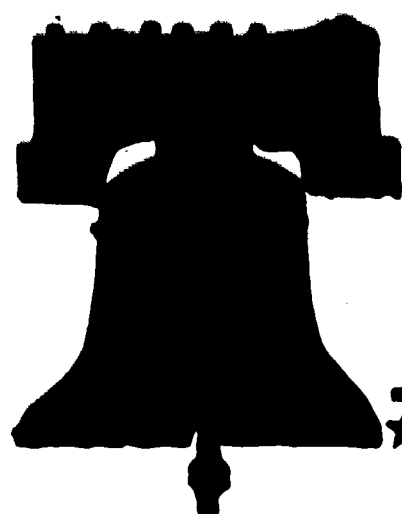

Michael Chase, director of operations of the Public Broadcasting System, was instrumental in Lyman's appearance on the program. "He was a pupil of mine," said Lyman, "I suggested the idea to him, and we developed a bigger and bigger program."

The program began in New York City and was shifted to the quarters of the Public Broadcasting System here.

Lyman was taught chess at the age of 9 by his uncle, Harry Lyman, a noted chess player in New England. His uncle visited the world championship match in Iceland but came back early to watch his nephew on television. "I wanted to have him on my program but he's too lazy," Lyman said.

For the last two years, Lyman has been a full-time teacher of chess. He refused to disclose his income over the period, but said his earnings have jumped substantially because of the television program.

drum out the cynical

Almost any day you can find a really good American, who has lost his perspective, and you have to listen to a tirade of "what's wrong with America".

This can be expected in our troubled times. We've endured all kinds of cynics for almost 200 years. But, don't let these misguided patriots mislead you with their cynical evaluation of our great country.

We've had our share of the disenchanted since 1776 . . . so don't let them talk you down . . . "SPEAK OUT ON AMERICA" . . . because we all know in our hearts that our system of government and our way of life, though not perfect, is still the greatest in the world . . . and you'd better believe it!

Mr. Holloman Plays For Organ Dedication

Luther Holloman, a well-known and highly respected musician of the Hope community, will function at the console of the new Baldwin, full pedal, two-manual organ at Bethel A. M. E. Church, at the time that transition will remove the organ's role from that of a possible secularization and extra-ecclesiastical instrument to that of an exclusive religious role in the house of God.

Rev. W. G. Wynn, pastor of Bethel, will sing the dedication classic, "The Holy City" by Adams.

The recital will begin at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Let's put you in the declarer's seat. The game is match point duplicate and it is an important tournament.

You win the diamond lead with dummy's ace and see that you have several lines of play to take all 13 tricks. You also note that many players will have settled for game; some will be in six no-trump with no real play to make it; a few in seven spades.

You also are happy to note that West did not open a trump. This leaves you a fairly straight line to seven.

You cash your ace of clubs; enter dummy with the king of hearts; discard your losing diamond on the king of clubs and are ready for new worlds to conquer.

You do exactly that and you will have seen that West played the jack of hearts.

Your play for seven at this point is to lead a heart to your ace. Assuming, as is quite likely, that West did not hold a singleton heart, you can rise with your ace and claim seven if West follows.

In rubber bridge you would see that a low heart play will guarantee your small slam. This is duplicate match point, and if you are a hog you will try for the overtrick; if you are a smart duplicate player, you will see that six spades bid and made is sure to be a good score.

THE BIDDING HAS BEEN:

TODAY'S QUESTION

East opens one diamond. You, South, hold:

♠ A Q 8 7 ♥ K J 4 ♦ 3 2 ♣ K 9 8 4

What do you do now?

THE GENERATION RAP

—by Helen and Sue Bottel

Damned—for ALL of His Life? RAP:

I wonder how many other guys have lost out because they don't have any choice: you're damned if you tell the truth, and damned if you don't. (One I can think of is Tom Eagleton!)

Here's the story:

I was picked up and booked for "possession of illegal drugs," which was technically true: three of us were camping in Yosemite during the "hippie" uprising (when local people got very upset). We weren't in that group, but one of the guys gave us two marijuana cigarettes, and we were caught with them.

Spending the night in the drunk tank is no fun for scared 18-year-olds. Next morning we figured we got off easy with a $50 fine, and six months probation—after all, we've heard about guys going to prison in states where marijuana smoking is a felony. (We aren't dopers—don't even smoke—but we had the two joints, so that was that—arrest, conviction, all put down in the records.)

A year later I applied for a job that paid so well it would have taken me through college. Naturally about two dozen other guys also applied. I knew if I checked "Yes" where the application form asked "Arrests... Convictions... On what charges: (Drugs)... I'd have as much chance for that job as Eagleton for the Vice Presidency. So I skipped over it...and got the nod!

Was doing great. My immediate boss complimented me on good work. And then, I got terminated by the head office. They'd checked my records and found I'd "falsified my application"—and it says right there this is grounds for dismissal.

Sure, I was wrong—but if I'd been truthful I'd have been washed out fast. We were wrong to take the pot too, but we paid for that mistake. What throws me is the future: On my next application I'll not only have to admit a drug conviction, but also a dismissal from a job. And what chance will I have?

I know you don't have the answer, Helen and Sue, but if you print the problem, maybe some of the personnel managers in big companies will see why it's so easy to make lists out of job-hunters.—STILL LOOKING FOR WORK

P.S. I asked for a second chance, knowing I was at fault, but "rules are rules, good-bye kid."

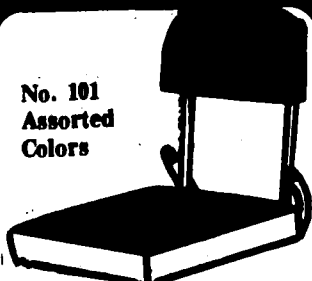

STILL LOOKING:

No, we don't have the answer, but we recognize the problem—and consider this one more good argument against arrest and conviction on a first-offense "possession of marijuana" charge.—HELEN AND SUE

Hope Wins, 3-0

Field goal is margin

After a game full of controversial calls and penalty flags, Hope finally came out on top 3-0 by virtue of an interception by David Huddleston and a field goal by Paul Bazar late in the second quarter.

The first quarter ended Hope 0, Prescott 0, but the second quarter was a punting battle until David Huddleston grabbed a Ronnie Johnson pass at the 46-yd. line of Prescott and returned it to the 15 to set up the game's only score as Paul Bazar blasted a 37-yd. field goal to give Hope the lead 3-0 at the half. And the same lead at the end.

The Olympics Aren't the Only Games around this summer, not even in West Germany. There also are the International Stoke Mandeville Games at Heidelberg where, despite the handicaps of the contestants—all paraplegics confined to wheelchairs—the competition can be very fast and furious. Above, heads down and wheels spinning the prides of the German and Italian women's teams race for first. Right, a score for Belgium against Canada. Below, Britain's R. Parkin, left, parries a thrust by Israel's U. Tassa. Some 1,000 contestants from 43 countries participated in the games' 15 events.

Fred Dryer finds a home at last

LOS ANGELES — (NEA)

— The tweeze of vanity is not in his strut now. He was something special those first three years in pro football. He's just another body on the roster of the Los Angeles Rams these days. And he's learning. Things about defense he never was aware of.

The total effect on Fred

Dryer is nonentity.

"I'm just another guy

here," he says. "I just want to be left alone."

The distinction of Fred

Dryer had been his selection as the No. 1 draft choice of the New York Giants in 1969.

Until then he was a guy no-
